Coffee prices remain on the defensive, with Arabica just above last Thursday's 2-1/2 week low after the International Coffee Organization (ICO) last Wednesday raised its global 2020/21 coffee surplus estimate to 2.63 million bags from a previous estimate of 2.02 million bags. Drier-than-normal conditions in Brazil are supportive for prices it was reported on Monday that the main growing region that accounts for about 30% of Brazil's arabica coffee crop, received only 10 mm of rain or 78% of the historical average last week. The all-important flowering period for Brazilian coffee trees begins this month, and a lack of rain may reduce coffee tree flowering and further curb coffee yields.
